Scott Robinson Goes “Wild”

INDIANAPOLIS – June 1, 2004 –Indianapolis-based Voice Scouts announced today that voice talent Scott Robinson recently landed the coveted voiceover job for Animal Planet’s Wildlife Journal program. Voice Scouts provides nationwide voice and on-camera talent for the corporate, radio, TV and multi-media industries.

The Wildlife Journal program, consisting of thirty one-hour episodes and one two-hour special, will premier on September 25 with the two-hour special on Animal Planet, which is owned by the Discovery Channel.

“I’m absolutely thrilled to be doing this,” Robinson said. “I was hoping to reach this level within five years. This one job puts me way ahead of schedule!” The show, which has a National Geographic-like quality, focuses on conservation officers and park rangers from all over the world and how they protect our environment.

Several Voice Scouts went through two rounds of auditions for the program, which ended up being about a six week process. “It was absolutely worth the effort,” said Becky Wilmes, Voice Scouts president and owner. “My Talent Relations contact at Discovery was so happy with our auditions that now they’re circulating them among all the producers at the Discovery Channel. They’ve also requested additional Voice Scouts demos,” Wilmes said.

Robinson, who has been represented by Voice Scouts for about two years, believes that Voice Scouts and working on this program has done amazing things for the development of his career.

“Becky Wilmes definitely has the best connections of any agent in town,” Robinson said. “And the Wildlife Journal producer is really working me! It’s definitely making me better—I’m really excited to be stepping up to the next level with the intensity of taping two to three times per week now through October.”
